

ABSTRACT

The present invention relates generally to animal breeding methods. More specifically, the invention relates 5 to methods for selecting for robustness among two or more animals based upon the quantity of immune cell subtypes and frequency of proliferative responses of lymphocytes in the animals.